The COVID-19 pandemic has had a significant impact on the aviation industry due to travel restrictions and the lack of demand among travellers.

For the past few weeks we have seen airlines go through different phases of impact due to COVID-19: from planes flying empty, to not flying at all and now during the next few weeks flights are slowly returning.

But what will the future look like for airlines? How will this affect travellers and how will this impact the meetings industry, which has been intertwined with the aviation industry for many years?

ICCA will be leading an inspiring and fascinating discussion, addressing these matters above in the first ever- global webinar.

Join us on the 18 June at 14:00 CET (convert to your time zone) to learn about the future recovery of aviation and restoring passenger confidence!

Our panel will include:

Senthil Gopinath
CEO, ICCA
Senthil Gopinath will address the importance of the ties between the meetings industry and the aviation industry.

Pierre Charbonneau
Director of Passenger Experience & Facilitation, International Air Transportation Association (IATA)

Pierre Charbonneau is responsible for setting standards to improve the end-to-end passenger experience in collaboration with industry key partners such as: airports, governments and strategic partners.

Stephen Aulds
Director of Safety, Security and Quality, SkyTeam Airline Alliance

Stephen Aulds is responsible for the strategic focus on alliance safety and security and supports 19 member airlines through a collaborative platform that brings together leaders in flight and ground safety, aviation security, emergency response, and quality oversight.

Edward Hollo
Director of Sales, SkyTeam Airline Alliance, ICCA Board Member and ICCA Transport Sector Chairperson

Edward Hollo is participating in the strategic leadership of the association and represent the interests of transport members of the association.

Register now

Registration is open to all. The panel will be moderated by Tamara Bernstein – ICCA Europe Regional Manager

Industry Partners

[Images of various company logos: EventsAIR, FiEXPO, ibtm, ijmex, simpleview]